

ABSTRACT

- 5 An ice chest or cooler having a vertically oriented chute to receive beverage containers such that when the cooler is being refilled the beverage containers are directed through an opening in the bottom of the chute, into the bottom of the main compartment containing the ice and chilled water, and beneath any beverage containers already present in the main compartment.